AGPS estimates the real numbers to be far higher due to the gag orders slapped by the Syrian government on the detainees' names and fates, along with the families' reluctance to report such cases over retaliation concerns.

Meanwhile, activists quoted eye-witnesses as stating that iron-laden trucks were spotted in the ravaged Yarmouk refugee camp.

The trucks were reportedly carrying metal gates and windows stolen from the camp.

Activists pointed the finger at government officers and their affiliated militias.

Over recent weeks, reports of theft have emerged in Yarmouk after Syrian government forces grabbed hold of the camp and reportedly burglarized civilian homes. Pro-government troops stole electric kit, furniture, and brass wares, among other equipment.

In the meantime, Palestinian refugees from Syria have been grappling with a precarious legal status in the turmoil-stricken Egyptian territories.

The Egyptian authorities continue to turn down Palestinians' appeals for visas under the pretext that "security go-aheads" have not been issued to that end.

The situation has gone from bad to worse due to the price hike, high rates of unemployment, and security turmoil rocking the Egyptian territories.

Nearly 6,000 Palestinian refugees have sought shelter in Egypt, fleeing the bloody warfare in Syria.

In another development, a so-called "We Learn with Pleasure for Palestine" summer camp has been brought to a close in Lebanon.

The camp, held by the International Assembly of Palestinian Instructors and sponsored by Lebanon's ex-education minister, Abdul Rahim Murad, took place between July 29 and August 11 in Dar AlHanan orphanage, in AlManara town, in the western Bekaa.

Theatrical shows, folkloric dances, national chants, and musical choreographies were performed by the students who joined the camp.

Some 240 refugee children and qualified volunteer instructors from Lebanon and Europe took part in the educational camp.
