Victims

Palestinian refugee Omar AlShaer, from the Fourth Division, died as he fought alongside the Syrian government forces against ISIS in AlSuweida suburbs, south of Syria.

AlShaer, a resident of Yarmouk Camp, was a member of the Syrian opposition outfits, before he joined pro-government forces.

Latest Developments

Palestinian and Syrian migrants expressed deep concern over the intent of the Turkish authorities to forcibly send them back to Syria as many of them overstayed their visas and others crept into the country via illegal routes.

The migrants said the Turkish police tightened security grip and intensified presence across border areas. Several security checkpoints have also been pitched across the Turkish territories.

A few days earlier, a number of refugees from Syria were deported from Istanbul after authorities found out that they had illegally entered the country.

According to unofficial data, some 8,000 Palestinians from Syria have been taking refuge in Turkey, where they have faced dire living conditions and been banned access to the local labor market.

Meanwhile, head of the political department of the Palestine Liberation Organization in Damascus, Anwar Abdul Hadi, said huge funds are needed for the reconstruction of Yarmouk Camp.

Abdul Hadi said efforts have been underway to cooperate with the Syrian authorities over the rehabilitation of Yarmouk Camp, among other destroyed zones.

He vowed that a budget will be allotted soon to repair ruined homes and allow civilians a safe return to the camp.

The Syrian government forces regained control over Yarmouk Camp and southern Damascus towns following a 33-day military operation launched on April 21. At least 33 civilians were killed and dozens more injured in the offensive. Heavy material damage was wrought on civilian buildings and property.

Over 80% of buildings in Yarmouk Camp have been either totally or partially destroyed in the warfare. 90% of homes have been subjected to burglary and looting.

In the meantime, Palestinian refugee Anan Khaled Abu AlAynein, aged 63, was arrested by Faylaq AlRahman forces.

The arrestee has been held captive for the seventh day. The reasons for his detention remain unidentified.

Several other refugees have been arrested by the opposition outfits north of Syria over allegations of drug trafficking or alleged affiliations with ISIS terror group.

Along the same line, alarm bells have been sounded over the unknown fate of several Palestinian families who have been held captive in Syrian dungeons.

The list of missing families includes the Mouloud Khaled AlAbdullah family, kidnapped on July 27, 2013 at a government-run checkpoint in Nisreen Street, in the AlTadhamun neighborhood, adjacent to Yarmouk Camp.

The family's 73-year-old father, Khalid AlAbdullah, has been diagnosed with cardiovascular diseases while the mother, Dheiba, 65, is a diabetic patient. Al Abdullah family members Ilham, 48, Anaam, 33, Yasmeen, 39, along with the latter's six-year-old kid Abada, have all gone missing so far.

Unverified reports said the family is being held in pro-government penitentiaries in AlTadhamun quarter. Others said the family members are locked up in a prison in Damascus. The family's actual conditions and whereabouts remain, however, shrouded in mystery.
