Victims

Palestinian refugee Fadi Jihad Awad, from AlSabina Camp in Rif Dimashq, died as he fought alongside the Syrian government forces in raging hostilities.

AGPS documented the death of 68 Palestinians sheltered in AlSabina Camp since the outbreak of warfare in Syria.

Latest Developments

Activists urged the Turkish government to take all measures necessary to improve the living conditions endured by Palestinian families from Syria in shelters and refugee camps set up in Turkey.

The activists said families held in the so-called “Krit Gendarme-Central” shelter have been grappling with tough conditions due to daily mistreatment and crackdowns.

According to the same source, life in the aforementioned shelter is similar to life in prison, where the refugees’ movement is blocked inside and out and mobile phones seized. Public phones are allowed only once a day.

Children and women have also been separated from their fathers and husbands in the shelter. Several of those who have been sick or caught diseases in the center have been left without treatment.

The activists called on the Turkish authorities to treat Palestinian refugees fleeing war-torn Syria as Syrian asylum-seekers and to immediately cease their double-standard measures.

Syrians caught in the Turkish territories are immediately sent back to where they came from while Palestinian refugees get locked up in remote shelters.

The activists urged the Turkish authorities to work on improving the refugees' living conditions and grant them safe shelters in Turkey, for which they headed following a journey fraught with danger, fleeing the embattled Syrian territories.

Meanwhile, Palestinian families who were forcibly deported to north of Syria launched calls for job opportunities so as to be able to feed their starved children.

The refugees urged UNRWA and all concerned bodies to work on providing work and raising funds for them in order to enable them to fetch much-needed items.

Along the same line, displaced Palestinian families north of Syria continue to sound the alarm over their children's lack of access to education as a result of the enforced deportation they have been subjected to.

They said that even the private school established in the area is made up of poorly equipped tents that are not fit to study in and risk to fall into pieces in the winter season. Neither professional training staff nor proper furniture are available at the school.

The families, who got displaced from Khan Eshieh and Yarmouk refugee camps, urged UNRWA to take its responsibility as regards the crisis and make urgent steps to smooth children's access to education in northern Syria.
