Victims

Civilians and rescue teams from AFAD charity removed the body of Palestinian refugee Ali Hasan Amer, nicknamed Abu Hasan AlDabou, from Afrin river, separating Deir Ballout and AlMuhammadiya refugee camps, in Afrin outskirts, north of Syria.

Ali, aged 19, went missing some 20 days ago. His body was found floating in the river. He was displaced from Yarmouk Camp to Deir Ballout Camp, north of Syria.

Sometime earlier, three other persons, including a child, drowned in Afrin river.

Latest Developments

German activists embarked on an e-campaign seeking to garner signatures to urge the German authorities to backtrack on a decision to deport the Palestinian refugee from Syria Arafat Shreih, his wife Samah Daqaq, and their child from Germany to Latvia.

The Bavarian government in Germany issued a decision to deport the family to the eastern European country of Latvia, where they were first granted asylum, before they headed for Germany.

The German authorities rebuffed the family's appeals for a legal stay in the country, where they have lived for three years.

The expectant wife and her husband, both formerly sheltered in AlNeirab Camp for Palestinian refugees, in Aleppo, were detained by the German police while their six-year old child was transferred to an orphanage.

Activists said the wife was released from a detention center last Friday, pending her deportation. As soon as she showed up at the airport the police decided to delay her refoulement after medical checks diagnosed her with health disorders.

Samah, who has been taking refuge in a shelter with her child, continues to appeal to the German authorities in Bavaria to cancel the deportation decision.

German news outlets said the German Migration Office ruled that the family be sent back to Latvia. The expectant wife and her husband, both formerly sheltered in AlNeirab Camp for Palestinian refugees, in Aleppo, have been detained by the German police while their six-year old child was transferred to an orphanage.

Activists said that Samah and her child have been taking refuge in a local shelter and urged local authorities to reconsider the deportation decision. The husband recently got a job in Germany. Their son got enrolled at a kindergarten and speaks the German language.

Some 1,082 persons signed the e-petition, protesting the deportation decision. The campaigners are seeking to 1,500 signatures as a means to pressurize the Bavarian government to cancel the deportation.

The family fled AlNeirab Camp for Palestinian refugees in Aleppo, before they reached Greece. Shortly after, the UN secured their arrival to Latvia, where they were granted asylum.

The family had been enduring abject conditions in Latvia due to socio-cultural and linguistic discrepancies along with xenophobic reactions and denial of access to vital services in the country.

In another development, the family of Palestinian young man Shadi Mahmoud Deib Mansour appealed to the national and international human rights institutions to work on disclosing the condition and whereabouts of their son.

Shadi, aged 20, went missing on January 9, 2016 in AlBab, in Aleppo, north of Syria, as he attempted to illegally enter the Turkish territories. At the time, Aleppo's suburbs were controlled by ISIS militias.

In the meantime, the Commission of Palestinians of Syria for Relief and Development distributed fuel supplies to displaced Palestinian and Syrian families in Deir Ballout Camp, north of Syria. Some 600 families, among them 325 Palestinian families, have been taking refuge in the poorly-equipped Deir Ballout Camp, where they have been enduring abject living conditions.
