Victims

Two members of the Palestine Liberation Army (PLA)—Raed Nahar, from AlSabina Camp, and Essam Fuad Sendid, from Yarmouk Camp—died as they fought alongside the Syrian government forces against ISIS militias in Teloul AlSafa, in ALSweida’s desert, south of Syria.

According to AGPS data, 274 PLA gunmen have been pronounced dead since the outbreak of Syria’s warfare.

In appeals emailed to AGPS, Palestinian families and activists called on PLA’s military commanders and the Palestine Liberation Organization, among other warring parties, to cease forcing Palestinian refugee youth into joining raging hostilities across tension-stricken zones in Syria.

Latest Developments

Statistics released by AGPS on the International Day of Non-Violence, observed on October 2, kept record of 5,584 physical violations perpetrated against Palestinian refugees since the launch of the Syrian conflict.

3,889 Palestinian refugees were killed as a result of the deadly air strikes, bloody shootouts, harsh torture, the blockade, or on way to other destinations via the “death boats.” 1,695 others have, meanwhile, been secretly held in Syrian dungeons, among them 108 women and girls.

Palestinian refugees in Syria have also been subjected to inhumane treatment and harsh psycho-physical torture. Over 5,000 refugees have been trapped in Babilla, Beit Sahem, Yalda, and Sidi Miqdad towns, south of Syria, after they were displaced from Yarmouk Camp.

Thousands of Palestinian refugees formerly sheltered in Yarmouk and Khan Eshieh have also been forcibly deported to northern Syria, where they have been grappling with dire living conditions.

AGPS continues to urge the Palestine Liberation Organization, UNRWA, and the Syrian authorities to live up to their responsibilities and take urgent action to save Palestinians scattered across the embattled Syrian territories and provide them with the physical, legal, and moral protection quite needed at such a critical stage.

Meanwhile, anonymous gunmen released the Palestinian refugee Ahmad M., a resident of AlSabina Camp, in Rif Dimashq, after they kidnapped him from a thoroughfare linking Hama and Mesyaf on September 25, 2018 on his way back home from Turkey to Damascus.

Ahmad's family said their son was released on September 28 after they were forced to shell out a ransom of 50 million Syrian Pounds.

Scores of Palestinian refugees have been kidnapped and held captive by pro-government and opposition outfits in Syria. Their families have been subjected to blackmailing around the clock.

In the meantime, displaced Palestinian families formerly sheltered in Yarmouk maintained vigil on Tuesday, October 2, in AlShabiba refugee camp, in I'zaz area, in Aleppo's northern outskirts, to protest their abject living conditions and the acute dearth in drinking water.

The refugees called on the Turkish and Syrian authorities, along with UNRWA and the Palestine Liberation Organization, among other institutions, to work on providing the camp, home to 45 families, with much-needed water supplies and relief items to feed their starved children and elderly relatives.

Dispossessed Palestinian families seeking refuge north of Syria have ceaselessly railed against the poor services, uninhabitable shelters, and tragic conditions they have been subjected to.
