Turning to Qudseia area in Damascus suburb, where regime forces allowed yesterday to enter amounts of flour and vegetables, while those forces continue to close the town since July 23, 2015, after one of its members was kidnapped by groups of armed opposition.

It is referred that the town of Qudsaya receives hundreds of Palestinian families who were displaced from their camps because of shelling and siege.

In the meantime, necessities of life are completely absent from Daraa province in general and Daraa camp, Muzareeb compound, and Gellin in particular, where water and electricity for those areas are still cut.

Residents of those areas are trying to bring water from distant places, and buy fuel, if available, to operate some generators, in addition to the flour crisis after Jordanian authorities stopped the entry of flour to the opposition controlled areas a few days ago after the closure of Naseib crossing border connecting Syria and Jordan in front of food aid convoys.

Activists warned of the consequences of that, and Daraa province will live a real crisis if there are no solutions, in addition to the continuation of bombing of Daraa camp and Muzeireeb which resulted in some victims, as the AGPS documented 312 victims of Palestinian refugees from Daraa province.

In a different context, deputy commissioner of UNRWA, Sandra Mitchell, said on Monday morning, that "any decision to postpone the new school year is not taken yet, and that decision would only issue by the Commissioner-General, which will be decided in accordance with the financial status of UNRWA."

Mitchell pointed out that UNRWA Commissioner-General is in contact with all parties in order to provide the necessary financial support, as he visited some foreign and Arab countries, and will talk in front of the Arab foreign ministers in Cairo.

Saying that the responsibility of international community is to provide support until a complete solution to the refugee issue will be found, and added that UNRWA has priorities in case of suspending support, and humanitarian issues in accordance with their order will govern its work in the coming period in light of the financial crisis.

She also mentioned that they take austerity measures such as lay off 85% of the foreign workers who work with contracts and development of some programs, as she confirmed that the decision to postpone the school year whether or not to take before or after the middle of this month, adding: "We will raise our voices until we get the funding, we open the schools on time».
