German media sources quoted the statement of the German Interior Ministry spokesman, who reported the re-apply of Dublin Convention rules on refugee for all origin countries and every Member States except Greece starting from 21 last October.

The current settlement does not necessarily mean the refugees returned to the out of bounds, while Germany announced in August a temporary suspension of Dublin Convention for the Syrian refugees, including Palestinian Syrians. The return of refugees to countries that obtained fingerprints is considered one of the most prominent issues that haunt the lives of refugees, while the asylum to Germany of many Palestinian refugees who were fingerprinted was not decided a year ago, which increases the dire situation of refugees after bearing the travel and the seriousness of access to European countries of asylum.
