RECENT UPDATES

Warplanes targeted the outskirts of Khan Esheh camp for Palestinian refugees in Damascus Suburb, by three missiles at least, in two consecutive raids, where the sound of explosions resulted in panic feeling amongst the residents.

Shelka vehicles also targeted, yesterday morning, the last open road to Khan Eshieh camp, (Zakia - Khan Alsheh road) with heavy machine guns, but did not result in casualties.

To the north of Syria, the AGPS' correspondent reported the injury of eight Palestinian refugees members of al-Quds pro-regime Brigade, they are:

"Ahmed Dawod Fayyad", "Abdulahdi Ahmed Houari", "Saleh Abdullah Al-Khatib", "Khaled Hussein Al-Sheikh Taha", "Abd Hassan Harb", "Mohamed Ibrahim Deguem", "Zakaria Hammoud Ghannam" and "Ahmed Khaled Kudsea", all of them are residents in Al-Nayrab and Hndarat camps. This incidents came as a result of violent fighting in the town of Khanasser and Ethreea at Aleppo Suburb between the Syrian armed opposition groups on one hand, and the Syrian regime's army on the other hand, many of the residents of Al-Nayrab camp were taking part in the fighting alongside the Syrian regime, since the headquarters of "Al-Quds Brigade" is based inside the camp.

On the other hand, the Syrian security released on 13 February 2016 the Palestinian refugee "Amjad Subhi Sarhan" member of the pro-regime Palestinian faction PFLP-GC, after 20 days of arrest, noting that Syrian security had arrested "Sarhan" three times during the past two months. Sarhan is in his forties, originally a descendant from the Al-Shajara village in Palestine.

In a different context, residents of Khan Dannoun Camp complain of the crowded school classes in the camp, as schools now unable to fully meet the students' educational needs due to this issue.

The number of studying hours was reduced to three hours a day, in which the student takes his entire curriculum, while schools hosts three studying- periods per day, causing great pressure on parents and students.

Parents of the students said "the GAPAR and the UNRWA should expand schools or allocate new buildings, and provide additional staff for the students to complete their lessons".

The illiteracy rate in the camp in the seventies and eighties, was around 50 to 60 per cent, dropped in the nineties to 12%, in 2013 the percentage of illiteracy was 6% only.

The literacy rate in Khan Dannoun camp now is about 80%. Holders of university degrees from the camp work as teachers in the neighboring villages of the camp.

Nevertheless, in the education sector, there are considerable fears of the students' dropout, females in particular, because of the continuing war since 2011 and its impacts on the economic conditions in a camp where large number of women and youth have to work to help their families.

On the other hand, and because of its geographical location, the regime's army tightens its security grip on the camp's entrances and exits, puts checkpoints on the main gate, using the camps' streets as a way for its military vehicles heading to battlefronts in the neighboring villages.

The residents of the camp complain of a living crises such as food shortages, widespread unemployment, poverty, and the continuation of power outages, water and communications outage for long periods of time.
